Auburn is indeed proud of her athletic record in general, and her football record in particular. Since the system planned by Coach Donahue became effective in 1908, Auburn has lost

Auburn's	only three S. I. A. A
Athletic	games, one each to
Record	Vanderbilt, Sewanee, and University of Georgia. In the last five years Auburn has lost only one game to a team that is a member of the association and has played more association teams than any southern college. This is in itself a great record, a tribute to the management and especially to the efficient work of Coach Donahue, but when we go more into details, the record looms the more remarkable, for in two of those games, Auburn's goal line has not been crossed. Neither in 1910 nor in 1914 could an opponent score a point against Auburn and especially in the season of the modern game with open play featured, is the record of nation-wide interest. In a season of eight games Auburn has scored 186 points, while the total of her opponents scores is zero. In establishing this record, Auburn met the following Association teams: Clemson, University of Florida, Mississippi A. and M., Georgia School of Technology, Vanderbilt and University of Georgia. Auburn's record against opponents of such metal is one that any college would envy.

In the previous editorial we stated that Auburn's record was a tribute to the Auburn management and especially to Graduate Manager Bragg. These men realized

The	long ago the value of
Auburn	a system of football
System	plays and the high degree of efficiency obtained by getting a good Coach and keeping him. Thus Auburn saw and developed a system which was coming into its own in 1908, just when Harvard had awakened and started her present system and Yale, is just now seeing daylight and planning a like management. Vanderbilt has recognized such a system and has been successful. Auburn has a well rounded system and is proud of its results.

The Auburn clubs and organizations have forged to the front in value to college life and today we have several clubs which are doing fine work in their respective fields; prominent among which

The	are the Agricultural
College	Club, the Pharmaceutical
Organizations	Society and the Engineering Society.

One of the most efficient organizations in the college is the band, which is ably directed by Prof. Thomas. The band has an important part in the student spirit, is the life of the military department, and a credit to the college in its concerts.

ORDER EXTRA COPIES OF THE DECEMBER ISSUE.

It is only possible for us to publish a limited amount of the good material furnished by Auburn's brilliant victories in this issue. The December issue will be nearly double size and will furnish excellent reading in the aftermath of the season. Brilliant articles will be produced and pictures of Auburn's Championship teams published. Place your order for extra copies now. The edition will be out before Christmas.

WHAT THEY SAY

Extracts from letters of loyal alumni as they send along their checks for payment on the gymnasium fund.

Montgomery, Ala.

"I herewith enclose you my check for $100.00, in payment of my subscription, due to the gymnasium fund. I hope you will have no difficulty in collecting the amount subscribed, and that the building will be pushed along to a rapid completion."

R. F. Ligon, '82.

Woodbine, Ga.

"Enclosed you will find my check for $50.00 to cover the first installment of my subscription to the Gymnasium Fund. I rejoice with all 'Old Auburn' at the complete success of this enterprise and am only too glad to do my share."

J. S. N. Davis, '08.

Oak Grove, Ala.

"As I have lost the letter telling me to whom to send my donation to the Gym., I am enclosing money order to you, with the request that you kindly hand it to the right man and ask him to send me a receipt. Here's hoping Auburn has another brilliant season."

B. C. Davis, Jr.

Lynchburg, Va.

"I am enclosing check, covering my first payment to the Gymnasium Fund. Please permit me to extend congratulations for the splendid work you have accomplished. I rejoice in the fact that the Alumni have responded so liberally and promptly for the needed amount to give Auburn the best gymnasium in the entire South. This spirit of loyalty, to my mind, is what makes AUBURN the GREATEST COLLEGE in the SOUTH. I wish to assure you that if I can ever be of any service in any way, I am always at your command."

L. G. Gresham, '05.

Bluefield, W. Va.

"In response to your letter, I take great pleasure in enclosing check for $150.00 in payment of my subscription to the Gymnasium Fund. I am glad that you were so successful in your campaign; and on my next visit to Auburn I expect to see a new gymnasium that will be a credit to the college and in harmony with the achievements and ideals of our Alma Mater."

George Duglinson, Jr., '04.

Lawrence, Kansas.

"I am sending by this mail my remittance to Prof. Hare. Congratulations on the happy outcome of your campaign for 'Old Auburn.' We shall all be proud of that Gym., but prouder of the spirit and leadership that made it possible."

Watson Davis, '03.

Richard City, Tenn.

"Please find enclosed P. O. money order to cover my first payment on the "AUBURN GYMNASIUM."

COLLEGE NEWS

AUBURN 19-MISS. A. & M. 0.

After stopping the brilliant line plays of the Mississippi Aggies, when forced into her own territory, Auburn began an attack on the A. and M. line which the latter could not stand, despite the efficient work of her tackles and having worn down the line, skirted her ends at will and worked brilliant forward passes for a total score of 19 to 0.

The game was slow, owing to the hot weather and fumbles were frequent, both sides being off in this respect, but seldom has as hard a fight, and as clean a game been staged at Rickwood park.

In the first quarter A. and M. made her only serious attempt at the Auburn goal, when, after bucking the ball into Auburn's territory, they failed at goal from placement, promptly recovering and held Auburn for downs. But with the ball on Auburn's twenty-yard line A and M. could only gain inches in four downs and Auburn began her savage attack before which the Aggies withered. Auburn then opened up her real attack of end runs and open plays and promptly ran up a sufficient score to cinch the game.

The work of the lines of both teams featured, the defensive work of Pitts and Louisell featuring for Auburn, with the work of Potter standing out for A. and M. Hart was the brilliant star of the offense, with Arnold who was playing with a very bad knee, a close second. Kimball on the defense and Kinney on the offense, stood head and shoulders above the rest of the Aggies' backfield.

Auburn's first score came in the second quarter, when, with the ball on A. and M's. 40-yard line, the ball was snapped to Prendergast at right half and he made as if going around right end. While almost in the arms of an A. and M. player, he passed the ball back five yards to Arnold who made a beautiful pass of 40 yards into the outstretched arms of Steed, who was waiting on the goal line. He caught the ball and placed it on the ground for a touchdown before the Aggies realized what had happened. The second touchdown came in the third quarter, when, after getting the ball on downs, Auburn sent Hart around ends three successive times, behind splendid interference for a touch down. The final tally was scored when Auburn worked the ball into A. and M's. territory on end runs and Bidez promptly bucked it across.

AUBURN 14-TECH 0.

Auburn, adhering strictly to straight football, and saving all her pet plays, defeated Tech 14 to 0, in an extremely hard fought game. Auburn entered the game, a favorite to win, despite the fact that the Yellowjackets have their strongest team in years, and slightly outweighed Auburn. Auburn did not gain so very much more ground than Tech, but she played her usual wide-awake game and took advantage of every break in Tech's play. Auburn won because she had the better coached team, because they were there with the necessary punch when it was needed, and because they presented a defense that became impregnable when crowded into its own territory.

Auburn's consistent game caused Innis Brown, who refereed the game to pen the following: "There is a notable feature concerning the playing of Auburn teams. They play their own game, regardless of what is happening about them, day in and day out. This game may or may not be good enough to win, but regardless of the final outcome, the Alabama warriors will be found plugging along from whistle to whistle, with a consistency which no other eleven in Dixie has ever shown. It is a great tribute to the coaching of Mike Donahue as well as to the spirit of the team."

Just before the first half ended, Auburn secured the ball and began a consistent attack on the Tech line, with Bidez carrying the ball most of the time, and pushed the pigskin across for the first tally. Louisell easily kicked goal. In the last quarter, Kearley covered the ball after Hayes had dropped one of Louisell's long spirals and Auburn promptly marched across the Tech line for another touchdown, bringing into use the famous "line divide" play.

Kearley's playing at left end was the most sensational exhibition of end play ever seen in the South and Robinson at the other wing was just a shade behind him. Hairston did yeoman service in backing up the line and was distinguished by his fierce tackles. The line plunging of Bidez and Harris for Auburn and Senter and Morrison for Tech featured.

AUBURN 6-VANDERBILT 0.

Before the largest crowd assembled at Rickwood this season and supported by six hundred leatherlunged students, Auburn for the third successive time humbled the mighty Commodores.

In a game that was most remarkable for the muddy field, Bidez and Harris ripped open the Commodore line almost at will, Hart skirted their ends, Prendergast plunged off tackle and the Auburn line remained impregnable. The defense developed by Coach Donahue had proven to be the most obstinate in the South, and they stood the varied attack of the McGugin clan almost without flinching. Only once did the general of the Commodore find the Auburn defense asleep, and then a thirty yard forward pass was completed but they could go no further.

Handicapped as the team was without the services of Ted Arnold, who had been expected to direct the team's play, and playing on a field that worked against Donahue's planned attack, the team proved concisely and conclusively that they were superior to Vanderbilt in every department of play. Had there been a fast field, we have little doubt but that the Tigers would have run up a three touchdown score. But in this victory there was honor for all. Vanderbilt admittedly played their best game of the season and deserve a wreath of honor for their splendid fight against such odds, as Jack Nye of the Tennessean expressed it. But to Auburn is again given the crown and Donahue has again shown his superiority over McGugin in the annual battle between the South's greatest coaches.

Curry deserves credit for most of the Commodore's success on the attack and the muddy field helped him, without a doubt, for he was able, because of his extreme light weight, to dodge the heavy Auburn linemen who were breaking through almost at will. To another of the Commodore's belongs the honor of keeping down the Auburn score and that one is "Roaring" Ammie Sikes, while there were honors too, for Cody and his splendid defensive work.

Returning to Auburn, we must place the credit of the Auburn team, as a whole, as in the Donahue machine, the individual is only a part of the system. The line from end to end deserves credit for its work and the backfield no less. Should any individuals be singled out we would laud Harris and Bidez, and the Auburn line more than shares their honors. For the details of the game we quote from the Birmingham News:

AUBURN MEN HEROES.

For Auburn there are the acclamations due the victor; the laurels that crown the victors and recognize strength, power, endurance and ability. Auburn has vindicated itself and the game it plays. The old game, power and drive, and drive and power is Auburn's game, and with its own game the orange and blue smashed its way to victory. Every man on the Tiger team played good ball and hard ball. There was no giving, and every foot Vanderbilt made was contested and fought for and surrendered only after the hardest struggle.

And Auburn came out of the fight with glory and honor reflected on the team, the coach and the student body. Vanderbilt had scored in every game until the Tigers were met on Rickwood Field. Michigan gave up three points when Sikes winged one through the maize and blue uprights; Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee knew the tramp of Commodore shoes crawling past the last white line.

But the team, touted as the strongest Vanderbilt has presented this season, could not dent the Auburn record. Auburn went into the game with its goal line uncrossed, and came out of the battle not only the victors in the score, but with its goal line still intact.

Auburn got eighteen first downs and Vanderbilt eleven.

The stars of the game are hard to pick, as the whole line-up on both sides twinkled brightly. Curry by his running stood out sharply, but this, in a measure, was nullified by his judgment in running the team head on to the Auburn impassable line when the goal was in striking distance and by his line plugging tactics, far far away from scoring distance.

Sikes played splendidly, offensively and defensively, and his work in all the more creditable as his condition was not good, his knee giving him a great amount of pain during the whole game. Cody played a good game, and he and Louisell, Auburn's star tackle, fought the game out to a finish and a standstill. On the other side of the line was Lipscomb, heavy and strong, the equal, if not the superior of Cody.

For Auburn, all the backfield men did exceptionally good work. The brunt of the Auburn attack rests on the backfield, and these men stood up well under the strain and played a jam-up, smashing, fighting, plunging game. In the line, Pitts stood head and shoulders above them all, playing a wonderful defensive game and a powerful, true offensive game—cinching his place as All-Southern center.

"OLD RELIABLES" THERE.

And out at the end of the line, Kearley and Robinson played just the game they were expected to, hard, smashing and stonewall on defense. If anything, Kearley outplayed his Captain, the All-Southern man of last year.

On defense, Auburn showed stronger than Vanderbilt, and better, comparatively, than on offense. Hardly any gains were made through the lines, and the ends smashed flank movements before they were well started. Vanderbilt, on the other hand, got through often, but missed the man, time and again. Another thing was apparent, something new to a Vanderbilt team, namely: time after time Vanderbilt men would hit a runner and fail to stop him, letting the runner get by for good gains after one, two and in some cases three Vanderbilt men had hit him.

But the details of the game pass into insignificance, considering the whole game. The game was a good one, a game such is as seldom witnessed on any field. Two teams fighting all the time, putting every ounce of strength and resistance into every play; playing sometimes on nerve alone, standing a strain such as few men can stand, but standing it with hearts of oak and sinews of steel.

BATTLE OF STRONG STEEL.

The battle was one of strong men, with heroes struggling for victory, the one side with victory behind them, fighting for what they had, the other with victory always just beyond their reach, always just a little bit away, sometimes almost in reach. The kind of a game such as only warriors who love to fight can put up.

The laurels of victory rest tonight on the sweaty brows of the husky Auburn Tigers, laurels earned by the might of their strength, and if those laurels carry with them the distinction of championship, they are nevertheless well earned and fully deserved.

Auburn for another year will be entitled to honors on all Southern grid-irons; the orange and blue may be challenged, but its record, clean and unspoiled for a season, stands as its own vindication.

AUBURN, 0-GEORGIA, 0

The 1914 record of the Auburn Tigers, which should have been the best of any team in the United States, was slightly marred by a scoreless tie with Georgia. That inevitable slump that comes to every team, came and despite the efforts of Coach Donahue and others in the way of warnings, that reaction that occurs after the big game, when an opponent was to be met who had been defeated by three teams that Auburn had already defeated, resulted in the failure of the team to show its offense and the game ended a tie. There is glory for Georgia in the game, as they fought against great odds just as no other Georgia team has fought, and there is glory for Auburn in that their goal line is still uncrossed and their record in this respect is the best in America. It is only to be regretted that Auburn did not recover from the slump until too late as a victory would have given Auburn the title without reasonable dispute. The result however lends some chance for argument and there will be no definite settlement of the Championship, despite the fact that in the only three ways which a title can be awarded Auburn has a decided edge. Those are, by strength of schedule, comparative scores against strong S. I. A. A. teams and comparative scores against common opponents. In all these departments, the advantage is with Auburn, and in the December issue of the "Alumnus" the opinions of the leading sportwriters and coaches will be given.

Reverting to the Georgia game, to Dave Paddock, of Georgia, belongs the lions share of the credit for Georgia's great game. Both on offense and defense, and in directing the teams play, he was a star. Harris for Auburn played a great game and his returning of punts was a feature but fumbling kept him from being the star he would have otherwise. In the matter of fumbling, Auburn allowed Georgia to cover the ball several times and thus punt out of danger. Auburn started a march to goal in the third quarter but Harris fumbled after breaking through the Georgia line for an eight yard gain, and Georgia promptly covered the ball. Other backs were guilty of fumbling at inopportune times and as the breaks of the game were against Auburn, Georgia always covered. Only in the last three minutes of play did Auburn show the power she possessed, when she began a march from her twenty yard line where Hairston intercepted a forward pass to Georgia's twelve yard line, where time ended Auburn's chances of victory. With the end of the game, only the matter of seconds, the line was charging well and the backs had quit fumbling, but as Auburn ripped off gains ten to fifteen yards at the clip, Georgia used delaying tactics and was penalized five yards; on the next down Auburn, in her anxiety to score was caught off-side and the time consumed in making these two penalties counted precious against Auburn. With the goal line almost in grasp they hurriedly lined up but before the last signal was called the whistle blew and the game was over.

CADET CORPORALS

The issuance of the order announcing the promotion of cadets to become corporals, is always of interest to the alumni, as well as the students themselves, as it permits one to become acquainted with the leaders in college work. These promotions which depend upon records as to deportment, academic work, and ability for leadership, have just been made in the following order, issued through the military department. As will be seen in the order the men rank in the order in which they are named; the first corporal becoming first Major, the second, second Major, and on down through the Captains and Lieutenants in their Senior year providing failure to maintain a certain standard in all departments does not necessitate reduction to ranks.

Headquarters Corps Cadets
 Alabama Polytechnic Institute
 Auburn, Ala., Nov. 17, 1914.

General Order No. 53.

The following promotions are announced to take effect this date:

THE FOOTLIGHTS.

The Footlights, the Auburn dramatic club, which, under the direction of Professor Wannamaker has progressed rapidly, is planning, to produce "David Garrick" at an early date, the cast having already been definitely decided upon. A great deal of enthusiasm has been manifest at the various rehearsals and meetings of the club and Auburn is to be congratulated in having the work in charge of so efficient a director and critic.

SPADE SOCIETY ORGANIZED.

For the purpose of selecting each year the ten most prominent and influential men in the Senior class and forming them into a society for the upholding of the honor and good name of the class and college the "Spade" club has been organized. In May of each year ten men from the list of eligibles of the Junior class, which includes every member of the class who has been a registered student for at least two years, is of good character and has maintained a certain scholarship average, are selected because of character, scholarship, activities in college work, athletics and leadership to become members of the Spade club for their Senior year. While some of the work of the organization is secret, democracy in all things is the aim, no politics enters the make up, and membership is voted entirely on merit. On this basis membership in the "Spade" is considered the honor attainable and "Spade" should mean to Auburn what "Skull and Bones" and "Scroll and Key" mean to Yale.

GLOMERATA BOARD AT WORK

The work on the 1915 Glomerata, which, under the direction of Editor Overstreet, bids fair to be one of the best ever issued for the institution, is progressing nicely and the plans now are to have the issue appear early next Spring. The Senior section will be sent to press Dec. 12th, and as the various departments are completed they will be given to the engravers. The contract for the 1915 Glomerata has been placed with Hammersmith Engraving Co., of Milwaukee, who are responsible for the very attractive 1914 issue.

INTERESTING AUBURN CLUBS.

One of the best things recently developed at Auburn, is the organization which has been developed in practically each department of college work, the purpose being to draw the students taking the same course into a closer feeling of fellowship and to enable them to get the benefit of criticisms among the members themselves. Some of these clubs are: The Agricultural Club, The Chemical Society, The Veterinary Club, The Engineering Society, The Pharmaceutical Society, and The Civil Engineering Club. Other clubs and societies which are popular, in structure and profitable are: The Wirt Literary Society, The Websterian Literary Society, The Glee Club, The Dramatic Club, The Band, The Orchestra and the Y. M. C. A. As a whole these various clubs are doing better work and seem to have fully established themselves so as to be of greatest benefit to their members. There is more enthusiasm in the work than has been the case heretofore.

INDUSTRIAL FILMS.

On December the first, three films of industrial motion pictures, illustrating the manufacture of "National" pipe from iron ore to finished product, will be shown before the students of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute under the auspices of the Engineering Society. The films are loaned through the National Tube Company and are interesting as well as instructive.

WITH THE ALUMNI

DR. REMUS C. PERSONS, '69.

We have the honor to present to our readers today the photograph of Dr. Remus C. Persons, retired surgeon of the United States Navy, Washington, D. C. Dr. Persons is in the class of 1869 and is one of the conspicuous members of that small but talented group of graduates, our rich inheritants from the old East Alabama Male College. From these 25 graduates of the old regime, among others there stand out with eminence, James Render Dowdell, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Alabama, Howard M. Hamill, '67, National Secretary of the Sunday School Association, and Remus C. Persons, retired surgeon of the United States Navy.

Dr. Persons was born in 1850, and after graduation at Auburn took his course at the Bellview Medical College, N. Y., at that time the center of medical education in the United States. He entered the medical service of the Navy in 1872 and for forty years served most efficiently, retiring in 1912.

Dr. Persons' service afloat carried him into all portions of the globe, his reminiscences of his travels being highly entertaining and instructive. From time to time he was stationed at the Marine hospitals at Mobile, San Francisco, Philadelphia, Brooklyn Navy Yards, and Washington, D. C. During the Spanish-American War he was Surgeon in charge of the captured Spanish forces in the camp of detention, Portsmouth, N. H. In this connection he won the admiration and affection of Admiral Cervera, Commander of the Spanish fleet, who remembered the American surgeon with gracious words and mementos.

Dr. Persons was present at the 1914 Commencement and his presence and words were deeply appreciated by the hosts of his younger brethren. Dr. Persons, though of the "older days," has preserved an unfagging loyalty and affection for Auburn, and by his loyalty and generosity, as well as by his modesty, and high worth, has won a secure place in the hearts of his younger brother Alumni.

MARRIAGES.

On Wednesday, October 28th, Miss Ruth Hewlett, of Baltimore, Md., and Mr. Arthur Noble, of Defuniak Springs, Fla., were married at the home of the bride. Arthur Noble is a very popular member of the class of 1910, a 'varsity man both in football and baseball, and one of the most prominent civil engineers in north Florida. He is receiving the congratulations of his many Auburn friends on winning so attractive a bride.

Thursday evening, October 22nd, the marriage of Miss Annie Solomon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Solomon, to Mr. William Shapard Dowdell, ex-'04, occurred at the First Presbyterian Church, Montgomery, Ala. "Shep's" many friends are congratulating the happy couple.

DEATHS.

One of the saddest announcements to many of the older Auburn alumni, was the notice of the sudden death of Dr. Will Mangum, '84, which occurred at an Atlanta hospital, where he had been hurried as a final effort to prolong his life. Though he had been in ill health for some time his condition was not regarded as any way serious until just a few days before his untimely death. The body was carried to Selma for interment in the family burial grounds. He leaves a family, several brothers, and a host of Auburn friends to moan his loss.

S. F. Anders, '13, is an assistant in the pharmacy department of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Ala.

Homer Cogdell, '12, a former Auburn gridiron star and now a prominent practitioner of the veterinary profession in Birmingham, was one of the many loyal Auburn men to return and aid in getting the team on edge for the Vanderbilt game.

T. C. (Daddy) Locke, '10, an all-Southern guard; F. W. (Tubby) Lockwood, '13, an all-Southern guard of that season; Jno. Davis, '11, an all-Southern fullback for two seasons; "Daddy" Ressijac, '12, a prominent candidate all-Southern fullback; were others who returned to help prepare Auburn for the Vanderbilt game. The inspiration which the team gets from the return of these old stars and the enthusiasm which they inject into the student body are not to be discounted. They are rich assets in Auburn's athletic success.

One of the most interesting lectures presented before the student body this season, was the address by Dr. Jno. O. Rush, '99, on "Sexual Hygiene." Dr. Rush forsook urgent business to deliver this address before the students here but should feel well repaid for his loyalty in the great value his address was to the students. His talk was to the point and was illustrated with slides prepared from subjects under treatment in his own laboratory. They were prepared only with great effort and are of much educational value.

Terry Greil, '96, a prominent wholesale merchant of Montgomery has been nominated for the Presidency of the Chamber of Commerce of Montgomery, the nomination being equivalent to election.

M. A. Pool, '06, is manager of the business of a large electrical firm at Memphis, Tenn. Besides his work with this firm he has recently bought a large farm near Memphis, from which he expects to get good results.
